SECURITY

SSL is an abbreviation for Secure Sockets Layer encryption. Every bank/payment interface involved in the electronic support of the Közérdekes organization has an encryption key that protects the communication channel. This encryption method is used in a significant percentage of the world's electronic commerce. The browser used by the customer uses SSL to encrypt the cardholder's data before sending it, so it reaches the bank in coded form. The bank only handles the card details necessary for the payment transaction on the SSL-encrypted payment page. Only the bank has access to the data provided on the payment page; the bank will not forward it to Közérdekes. The site will inform you about the transaction result after payment. To pay by card, your internet browser must support SSL encryption.

ACCEPTED CARDS

PayPal's online payment system allows the use of Mastercard/Maestro, VISA and VISA Electron (Electron only if permitted by the issuing bank) and American Express bank cards, as well as payments with web cards suitable for online use.

If you do not receive confirmation of the transaction's success, the transaction is unsuccessful.

If you would like more information about the result of the transaction, or in the event of its failure, the reason for it, or the details, please contact your account-keeping bank.

INFORMATION FOR RECURRING DONATION

Recurring payment (hereinafter: "Recurring Payment") is a function provided by PayPal, which is a function related to the acceptance of bank cards provided by PayPal through the Buyer's (Donor's) PayPal account, which means that the account or bank card details provided by the Buyer (Donor) during the transaction can be used to initiate new payments in the future without having to re-enter the account or bank card details.

After setting up Recurring Payment, the bank's system will debit the selected account, bill or bank card of the Donor (in the bank's terminology: Buyer) once a month/year with the selected amount, according to the selected value. The Service Provider (in this case, the service provider: Közérdekes) is directly liable for recurring payment transactions initiated incorrectly or illegally by the Service Provider, and any claims against the Service Provider's payment service provider are excluded.
